

Meta Titles & Meta Descriptions

Meta Title and Meta Description are HTML elements that provide a brief summary of a webpage for both search engines and users. The meta title appears as the clickable headline in search results, while the meta description appears below it as a short overview of the page. Together, they help search engines understand the page's content, improve visibility in search results, and encourage users to click on the webpage.

Why Meta Tags Matter

Search Visibility

Keyword-rich titles help search engines understand and rank your pages accurately.

Click-Through Rate

Compelling descriptions entice users to choose your result over competitors.

User Experience

Clear, relevant snippets set accurate expectations and reduce bounce rates.

Meta Titles & Descriptions: Defined

Meta Title

The clickable headline shown in search results and browser tabs. Written in the <title> tag, it signals page content to search engines and users alike.

Optimal length: 50–60 characters

BEST PRACTICES

Writing Meta Tags That Work

Following these four principles ensures your meta tags are both search-engine friendly and compelling to real users browsing results.

Key Takeaways

- Keywords First
Place your primary keyword near the start of every title and description.
- Respect Character Limits
Keep titles under 60 characters and descriptions under 160 to avoid truncation.
- Write for Humans
Include a clear value proposition and call-to-action to boost click-through rates.
- Optimize Every Page
Home, service, and blog pages each need unique, targeted meta tags.
